

New York restaurant comes to Miami

By Emon Reiser

Upscale Italian eatery Tutto Il Giorno will open its first restaurant outside of New York at Biscayne Beach condominium, currently under development.

The restaurant's opening date has not been set. The tower's developers New York-based GTIS Partners and South Florida-based Eastview Development announced Wednesday night that the 399-unit condominium is planned for completion in 2016.

Biscayne Beach condominium, a 51-story residential tower at 711 NE 29th Street, is Tutto Il Giorno's fourth location. The restaurant already touts locations in New York's well-known areas, such as the Hamptons and TriBeCa.

"My vision for our next venture is to bring the Hamptons and New York to Miami, creating a space and a place where family and friends will find their second home," said Tutto Il Giorno Partner Gabby Karan De Felice in a news release.

Once Tutto Il Giorno opens, its menu will feature Italian and Mediterranean cuisine in addition to seafood and Caribbean selections for Miami's residents. De Felice, one of the founders and creative director of the Tutto Il Giorno brand, will design the new Miami restaurant at Biscayne Beach tower.

As for the building plans regarding Biscayne Beach tower, the waterfront property will feature a private members-only Beach Club overlooking Biscayne Bay, resort-style amenities, an outdoor bar and lounge area, with pre-construction units starting in the $400,000 range to multi-million dollar penthouses.

Enlarge Photo

Once Tutto Il Giorno opens, its menu will feature Italian and Mediterranean cuisine in addition to seafood and Caribbean selections for Miami's residents.